

At 9 o'clock on the evening of March 11th, at dawn of that day the Russians held a line on the Hun River from a point ten miles east of Fushun to Mukden, the front extending to a point six miles north of Mukden station, the continuous line of battle generally paralleling the railway four or five miles distant.

A terrible dust storm raged and tension had reached its extreme limit. It was realized if any point of the Russian line gave way all would be lost.

The position in the most extreme danger appeared to be north of Mukden station, where it seemed for a time the Japanese might break through and envelop the Russian line of retreat. General Kuropatkin concentrated heavy columns there, took command himself and succeeded during Thursday morning in forcing the Japanese back from the railroad and also in driving the bodies of Japanese east of the railroad.

The Japanese appeared to point to success when, suddenly and unexpectedly, news arrived that the Japanese had broken through between the eleventh and fourth army corps, taking advantage of the hurricane that was blowing clouds of dust into the faces of the Russians to deliver an attack which the Russians were not prepared to meet. It was impossible to support the retreating corps, as the Russian line of battle at other points, and, as the danger of the communications being severed by this attack from the east was imminent, retreat was determined upon, and immediately began.

Stores Destroyed.

The four principal roads leading northward toward the Pass were completely occupied by a continuous file of artillery and transport and the retreating army blackened the country between.

Before beginning the retreat all the stores and military buildings and everything that would be of service to the Japanese were set on fire. A large amount of baggage and many guns were abandoned. All rolling stock belonging to the main railroad was brought away, and a single car or locomotive was left at Mukden, though some cars belonging to the military roads behind the Shikhe River positions were abandoned.

About 1,500 severely wounded Russians and several hundred Japanese were left at Mukden hospitals, together with a complete Russian medical staff, which was entrusted to the care of the Chinese Japanese. The remainder of the wounded in hospitals were sent northward and a railroad train remained at Mukden, with the wounded and brought off a trainload of those wounded on the retreat, many of whom reached the Pass without their injuries being damaged.

Mukden station was abandoned at 7 o'clock Friday morning. The retreat was orderly and unimpeded, and, in fact, a dust storm blowing directly southward filled the eyes and faces of the troops, but at the same time tended to blind the enemy and delay pursuit from the south.

Flying Army Bombarded.

The retreating columns were bombarded on both flanks by batteries which it was impossible to silence, the shells reaching the Dandarin road from the east with especial frequency from the villages of Tawian, eight miles south of Mukden, and Pu, five miles further north. Under these circumstances the retreat was conducted with astonishing precision, which was largely due to the personal efforts of General Kuropatkin, who, with his staff and uniform yellow with dust, was everywhere when needed.

The troops composing the rear guard fought with an extraordinary bravery under the eyes of the commander in chief and the morale of the entire army under the circumstances was excellent. The cause of the Mukden defeat is attributed to many reasons, one of the most important of which is insufficient information concerning the Japanese and their strength, which was far in excess of Russian calculations. The censorship bureau at first recommended work at the Pass, but is returning to the rear guard, communication with which is still open.

The Retreat Begins.

1:55 P. M.—At 7 o'clock Friday morning a great explosion, which blew up the Hun River bridge and an immense cloud of smoke from the burning settlement gave indisputable testimony of General Kuropatkin's decision to relinquish also the second of his great positions—a decision which was known on Thursday. The army was withdrawing all the latter half of the night, while the houses of the settlement had been vacated earlier and their lights left burning. Morning showed through the great smoke clouds, and for miles about the settlement, armies three and four files deep, in all the main roads moving north along the east side of the railway.

The battle still centered north of the Imperial tombs, with occasional shots along the Hun River, where, later, an opening permitted the Japanese to make a quick advance and dash toward their main operation with the purpose of concentrating and cutting off the Russians.

At 11:30 o'clock the Japanese had partly succeeded, for at Tawian, with shrapnel, they shelled the sides of a rectangle, where the main army was moving with great exertion over inadequate, though dry roads, and furrowed fields, but in perfect order. The Japanese, however, accomplished at this place nothing more than a momentary stampede.

Wonderful Spectacle.

This retreat must be reckoned as a wonderful spectacle. For miles infantrymen and baggage wagons to-day strewed the line of march. For rapidly the Japanese movements for the first time were outstripped by the Russians in withdrawing. The Russians perhaps had staked more on the combined opinions of their commanders and risked more than in any previous battle with the Japanese. The crucial point of the retreat occurred at dusk, when the rear guard troops and the transport, which has reached Santalite, ten miles north of Mukden, suddenly received a rifle and grenade assault from Japanese, which produced a stampede. The success of the Japanese in closing against the armies trying to get away from the extended Hun River bridge position, was evident.

In ordering a detail General Kuropatkin is said to have declared it was done in order to satisfy protesting opinion, that what ever the blame, he would take it, which, in the light of events, seems to show that he best knew the capacity of the soldiers.

The battle of the right flank and round about Mukden appeared to have been the greatest of the war except at Port Arthur. During the terrible duststorm of Thursday the Japanese, with machine guns, occupied several empty houses in a village held by Russians and otherwise battered their positions west of the railroad as dusk when the retreat came, with Japanese shells on all sides, it suggested another Cronde incident. For ten hours not a man nor a horse rested, while the wounded were being gathered up on the two sides in the rear and often in the center, and every energy was bent toward getting out of a trap, the jaws of which were almost upon the Russians.

Another Estimate of Losses.

Santalite, the Associated Press correspondent, with others lost all baggage in the retreat. Many bodies of troops were encountered, some of them in advance, and some in the rear, which were constantly mistaken for the Japanese. Forty miles of retreat was accomplished in seventeen hours. It was virtually through ploughed fields, with enormous dust clouds, which made it impossible to see any distances. A great amount of the equipment, ammunition, guns and stores of the Russians were lost.

The losses of men on both sides are reckoned at 140,000 for the entire fight.

NOW OUT OF DANGER.

Kuropatkin Reports to Czar That Retreat Has Been Successful.

(By Associated Press.)

ST. PETERSBURG, March 11.—A dispatch from General Kuropatkin, timed 6 P. M., March 11th, says: "The retreat of the army was very dangerous, and especially trying for those corps which were some distance from the Mandarin road."

"The Japanese penetrated far into the mountains in the direction of Tawian. This threatened our troops, but thanks to extraordinary efforts, the reason the Japanese advanced. The enemy cannonaded the route of our retreat from the east and west. The Eastern Mandarin road was bombarded at two points near Tawian and the Pu River."

"Our troops are very brave. The second army, under Biderling, so easily from the south is that the Hun River, which covered our position at Mukden, was frozen over."

"General Zepirsky is wounded, but remains at the front. The Associated Press reports that the dispatch received by Emperor Nicholas from General Kuropatkin last night, in addition to announcing the retreat of the Russian armies, added:

"Our retreat is being conducted with the enemy harassing both our flanks. The second army, under Biderling, has suffered the heaviest both in killed, wounded and prisoners. "How many are surrounded is unknown."

KAULBARS CAPTURED?

"Send Another Army," Says Vladimir, When Asked What Czar Will Now Do.

(By Associated Press.)

ST. PETERSBURG, March 12.—2 A. M.—Russia still has an army in the Far East and its line of retreat is not cut. Field Marshal Oyama's trap again was sprung too late to bag the prey he desired, and though pounded on the rear heavily in killed, wounded and prisoners, General Kuropatkin, with the main portion of his army already has arrived and joined hands with the reserves in preparing a position behind which the beaten army may find shelter. General Kuropatkin himself, with the rear guard was reported Saturday afternoon in the vicinity of Syanzys, twenty-five miles below the Pass, having accomplished some fifteen miles of the retreat, and being already beyond the jaws of the trap, as originally set.

Both General Kuropatkin's official dispatch and that of the Associated Press from the Pass were filed Saturday afternoon. The news contained in these dispatches will cause unbounded relief in St. Petersburg. A long day's march or even two, remain to be accomplished, but the retreat now presents no tactical difficulties and is believed to be largely a question of shaking off the pursuing Japanese from its flanks and rear and apparently no longer a matter of cutting its way through a formidable force.

The Associated Press dispatch from the Pass was filed with great difficulty by the correspondent, who left Mukden with the rear guard, spent Friday with General Kuropatkin and took a long ride to the Pass Saturday morning, after which he again returned to the front.

Among the rumors current in St. Petersburg yesterday, one, said to emanate from the war office, was that General Kaulbars and his staff were among the captured. It was impossible to obtain confirmation of this or any of the other rumors assigning various specific

Thousands of Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

Almost every one, from personal experience, knows that the effects of any kind of severe physical strain are felt, first of all, in the small of the back—in other words, in those Vital Organs, the Kidneys. This is as true in the case of the very powerful as it is with one of less strength, and it is especially true whenever the kidneys are weak or out of order.

The Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, strengthens the kidneys and, through them, helps all the other organs.

WOMEN suffer untold misery because the nature of their disease is not always correctly understood; in many cases when doctors, they are led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for their ill, when in fact disordered kidneys are the chief cause of their distressing troubles.

DID'T KNOW I HAD KIDNEY TROUBLE

I had tried so many remedies without benefit that I was about discouraged.

but in a few days after taking your wonderful Swamp-Root I began to feel better. I was out of bed and run down generally; had no appetite, was dizzy and suffered with headache most of the time. I did not realize the my kidneys were the cause of my trouble, but somehow felt they might be, and I began taking Swamp-Root as I have stated. It is such a pleasant taste to Swamp-Root, and it goes right to the spot and drives disease out of the system. It has cured me, making me stronger and better in every way, and I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers. Gratefully yours,

Retreating Russians Flanked on Both Sides—Suffer Heavy Losses.

My kidneys and bladder gave me great trouble for over two months, and I suffered untold misery. I became weak, could not do much, run down, and had great difficulty in retaining my urine, and was obliged to pass water very often at night and day. After I had used a sample bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and I immediately felt a relief, and I immediately began to feel better.
